

Twitter:

#CitizensUnited, meet #ShareholdersUnited. Keep our investment $$$ out of politics
<http://pubc.it/aSharePA> #investor

#CitizensUnited, meet #ShareholdersUnited. Keep my #401k $$$ out of politics
<http://pubc.it/aSharePA> #investor

Corporations aren't people, but shareholders are. <http://pubc.it/aSharePA>
#ShareholdersUnited #investor #democracy

Don't let your nest egg become a political weapon 4 the corporate agenda.
<http://pubc.it/aSharePA> #ShareholdersUnited #401k #pension

Facebook:

There's a new front in the battle against corporate power. Don't let CEOs use the peoples' investment dollars to advance the corporate agenda. TAKE ACTION for shareholder protection <http://pubc.it/aSharePA>

Email:

Subject: Your money for corporate campaigns?

[[First_Name]],

Newly empowered by the U.S. Supreme Court's disastrous ruling in Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission, corporate executives are ready to spend unprecedented millions to influence upcoming elections.

If you or someone you know has a 401(k), a similar retirement account or other investments, the corporations funded by these investments could be part of the problem.

Don't let your family's nest egg become a political weapon for the corporate agenda.

Tell your member of Congress to support the Shareholder Protection Act.

If a majority of shareholders tell a corporation to stay out of politics, then the corporation should do exactly that.

Corporations aren't people, but shareholders are. The Shareholder Protection Act (H.R. 4790) proposed by Rep. Michael Capuano (D-Mass.) would empower shareholders to vote on whether or not to allow executives to spend corporate money on political campaigns.

Take action for the Shareholder Protection Act today!

Any household with a 401(k) invested in stocks or mutual funds -- nearly one out of every two today -- has a stake in how the corporate money in those funds is spent.

The 2012 presidential election is right around the corner, and CEOs are eager to use investor money to promote the corporate agenda. Now is the time to stand up to corporate power!

Go to www.URLGOESHERE.org

Thank you for all you do.

(insert your group)